LEGEND

january

1940

Foreword

• • • Weequahic, we take our leave of you with a deep and heartfelt regret. The four years that we have spent within your corridors can not easily be forgotten; nor do we wish to forget them, ever.

Yet, in time, it is possible that even memories of you may be obscured by adult responsibilities; that is, unless we have something to refresh our memories.

Hence, the primary purpose of our Yearbook is to render an interesting and accurate account of life within our school, as seen through the eyes of the students who are about to graduate.

This volume has been written, illustrated and compiled by the members of the class of January, 1940. It is their tribute to our school.

THE EDITORS.

Dedication

• • • To Miss Virginia M. Beard, our class adviser, for her sincerity, good humor, and genuine interest and aid, we, the class of January, 1940, dedicate this volume of THE LEGEND.

Assistants to the Principal

TO THE GRADUATES OF JANUARY 1940—

• • • I wish you the best of luck: economic contentment and emotional stability, accompanied by the satisfaction that will come from being a useful member of society.

Farewell Song

Tune—"Auld Lang Syne"

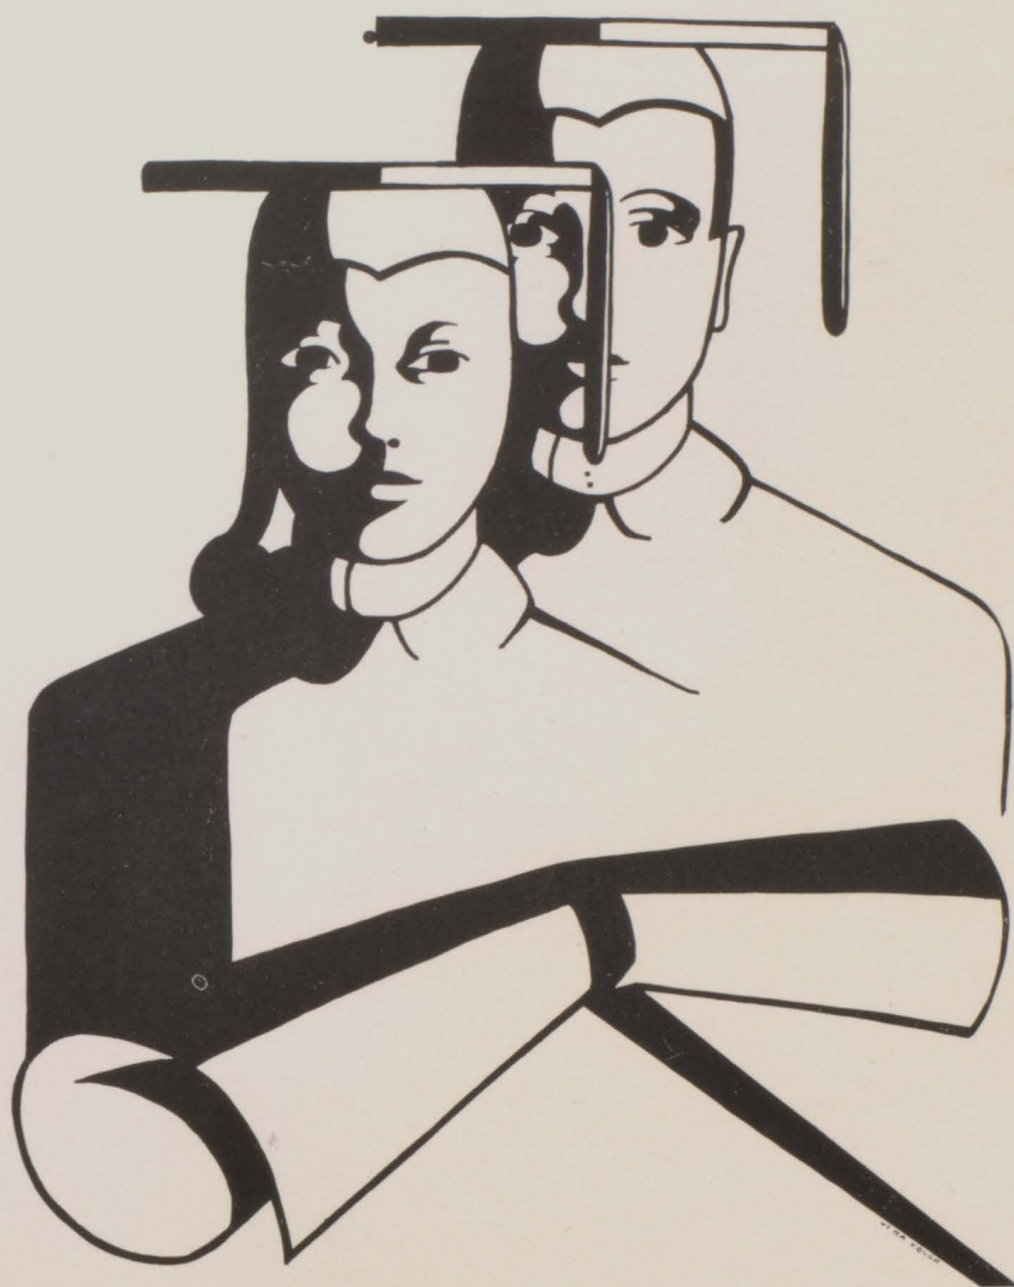

*The outer gates are open wide,
And we shall soon depart
Upon the path of human life,
Our knowledge to impart.*

*We'll take with us the happiness
Of memories gone by,
The little acts of thoughtfulness
Until the day we die.*

*Our youth, our strength we will put forth
To glorify thy name;
A good example we will make
And never bring thee shame.*

*But now the time is drawing near,
And everything must end;
So in our last good-bye we'll say:
"Weequahic, you've been a friend."*

Last Will and Testament of the Senior Class

WE, the extremely erudite members of the Class of January, 1940, upon departing from this esteemed institution of the savants, being of sound mind, memory, and understanding, out of the benevolence of our charitable souls, do make, publish, and declare this to be our last will and testament:

1. To all undergraduates we leave our large wigwam on the hill.
2. To Mr. Herzberg and to Mrs. Rous we leave the care of our successors, the present 4B class.
3. To Mr. White, our patient vice-principal, we leave students with minds decided.
4. To following classes we leave as sympathetic an advisor as Miss Beard.
5. To Mr. La Penna and the yearbook staff we present a bottle of Bromo Seltzer, beneficial in the cure of headaches and pains, caused by their labors on this monumental work.
6. To the 4B class we leave the troubles and heartaches of collecting dues.
7. To the advertising staff of the next yearbook we leave Gladys Barnhard's ability to obtain advertisements.
8. To studious persons we bequeath Latin, German, and French books with translations included.
9. To all incoming students we leave the privilege of using our elevators and escalators, (upon their installation).
10. To the inexperienced freshmen we empty our pockets filled with crib-notes and signed hall passes.
11. To the juniors we leave the hope that they may some day be seniors, and to the sophomores we leave the tender freshmen.
12. To all inhabitants of the building we leave, with much regret, the fragrant odors of the chemistry laboratory, lunchrooms, and incinerators.
13. To all bored and under-nourished students, we leave numerous slabs of second-hand chewing gum to be found under seats and inside desks.
14. To those students with the trait of loquacity and to those who don't desire an atmosphere of quiet, we leave our study halls.
15. To all athletic teams we leave the report cards of the Honor Society, containing an abundance of A's to be distributed among the players who have not much time for their studies.
16. To all over-worked students we cheerfully bequeath the assembly programs so that they may regain some much needed sleep.
17. To the cafeteria we donate a supply of pennies to be given to those students whose constant cry is: "I need a penny more to make a nickel."

With heavy hearts and a teeny-weeny tear we relieve ourselves of our grievances and sincerely hope that the new senior class will dutifully follow in our footsteps.

Signed, sealed, and published by the graduating class on this 24th day of January, 1940.

Class Prophecy

(An Epistle)

January 24, 1955.

Dear Doris:

Whenever I turn the pages of that personality guide, "Gens Du Monde," of which you are editor, I invariably discover the name of one of our former Weequahic classmates who has attained some high station in life and my thoughts go back to a certain accomplishment during my last term at Weequahic.

Do you remember, DORIS, some fifteen years back, when I was commissioned (self-commissioned) to prophesy the future attainments and careers of our classmates? Certainly, I had never professed the art of necromancy to be within the realm of my talents, and, ignorant of the canons of wizardom, I had resorted to my own imagination. Today, we know how erroneous my conclusions were.

Many of our former fellow-students have made contributions which have been of benefit to humanity. It is hard to believe that the great scientist, NATHAN KORSON, who is at present affiliated with the Rockenmorg Institute for Tropical Diseases, was a student of Weequahic. HAROLD PERLMUTTER and SOLOMON OSTROFSKY, deep in the recesses of the laboratory of their veterinary hospital, have made an admirable contribution to the canine world by permanently delivering dogs of fleas. A number who well deserve to be captioned "Florence Nightingales" are GERTRUDE BERMAN, EDNA FELD, LAVERENE BERMELI, and EDNA HOFMANN.

Last night, when I attended the JERRY KANTER Concert sponsored by PEARL "Griffith" SPRING, patroness of music, I was accosted by two dignified gentlemen. Who should they be, but those worldly "men of affairs," JEROME OKIN and DAN MacGREGOR, president and vice-president respectively of PERDECK, PERMISON, & POLOW. After many demonstrative greetings, they enlightened me as to the fortunes of ZENNA KAUFMAN, HILDA UNTERMAN, and ARNOLD KESSLER. It appears that ZENNA has discarded a promising future for the position of settled housewife. HILDA is serving in the capacity of assistant secretary to the secretary of our Secretary of the Interior, MILTON FISCHBEIN. Obstacles have served merely as stepping stones in the career of MILTON, who first served as public servant with his entrance into the field of forest preservation. ARNOLD, you recall, has gained no small repute as a writer of trenchant wit and is now indulging in a lengthy satire entitled "A Satire on Satires".

According to BLANCHE BERNSTEIN'S daily "Columnscope," producer LEON ANKER'S new play, starring RAE USDIN, NAN BLAIR, and that song and dance man, ELI LONDON, is the year's superlative. That competent executive's secretary, ESTHER FURST, has at last deigned to marry her boss's son. Poetesses RUTH FRIEDMAN and FAYE ZINN attended the dedication of the Post Office murals recently completed by IRVING FADEM. What do you think of orchestra leader FRED GOLDBERG'S new version of swing? With the veteran songstresses BEA FIERSTEIN and GLADYS ADLER at his aid, the public is more than likely to take a fancy to it.

There has been much ado concerning the recently published volume, "Higher Mathematical Problems." The ludicrousness of the situation is that only its authors, the famed Hahverd professors, MEYER BERGSTEIN and IRWIN BRAGMAN, can interpret these problems and prove the hypotheses. Remember WILLIAM LYNCH, who had such an aptitude for Latin? He is now prospering in the Latin pony business.

DORIS, May I inquire what your conclusions were concerning the theft of DOT WALSER'S famous emeralds? G-man ROBERT SCOBLE has made an accusation, but the suspect has as yet not been proved the culprit. When I attended the first courtroom session, I discovered that the jury was the object of the spectators' attentions. This jury was unique in the fact that its members, ERWIN MICHELSON, LEONARD KAUFER, ETHEL GURVITCH, ISABEL GLASS, HELEN ZENTS, THELMA SCHACHAT, EVELYN TABAKIN, HARRY KARP, EVELYN FARDELLA, DOROTHY HIBEN, AMELIA MATUS, and HARRIET LOSHIN vociferously attempted to reach conclusions before the actual official proceedings had begun. Judge JOE "Just" LAVA was the picture of desperation. The poundings of his gavel failed to bring the court to order. He was tempted to wriggle his ears and stand on his head. Because of this confusion combined with that of RUDOLPH LIFSHIN'S staff of indefatigable photographers, MORTON PAPIER, JULES BAUER, and LEO REISBERG; the harangue of Lawyers BARNETT MITZMAN and BEA SKLAR; and the clatter of typewriters; the whys and wherefores were difficult to determine. However, among the courtroom stenographers, I recognized BETTY DORFMAN, BEATRICE CRANE, IRENE LERNER, RACHEL DEL SORDI, and KATHLEEN KIRSCHNER.

As our instructors had always suggested would happen, we have produced a goodly share of women confabulators. In all probability, at this very moment, VIVIAN LAVIGNE, PEARL ALESHNICK, JANET SHULMAN, and SYLVIA KAPLAN are supposedly engaged in a mah jong game, deep in gossip, the tiles remaining dormant. Perhaps their conversation will touch on the advancements of their children or, more likely, their grandchildren. FELICIA SHAPOW, REBECCA BRANDCHAFT, EVELYN GOODMAN, and FLORENCE ROTHMAN, altruists all, maintain an institution for the needy. As social workers, they have succored humanity in no small way. We have produced men like IRVING FISHMAN, LEONARD LERNER, MORTON KLEIN, and ROBERT KAY, who after business hours gravely discuss politics or measures contemplated by the "Newest Deal."

On many occasions when it was necessary to confer with my printers, the House of FRED LE VINE, I have boarded a SIMON ABRAMSON Airliner. The ABRAMSON Airlines have always had, in the past eight years of their establishment, a worthy reputation for safety and service. This has never been a source of wonder to its patrons, for this airline employs as air hostesses MARGARET MELVILLE, DORIS LIPPMAN, and ELEANOR MOSKOWITZ.

Years ago, DORIS, I often wondered if your tremendous success as Personals Editor of our class yearbook would be indicative of future laurels. Today, whenever I am curious about a certain personality, I no longer trust to my imagination. I simply refer to your magazine.

Sincerely yours,

GERTRUDE DAVIS

Nightmare

Rushing, dashing to and fro,
The papers flying crazily,
Shouting, shrieking, moaning low,
A Yearbook meeting, plain to see.

In the corner heads together
In a study deep and brown,
The chief and printer wonder whether
Pictures should go up or down.

Face to Face and wildly glaring,
Chief and member of the staff;
"Your prophecy," quoth she, "is daring";
Says he, "Yours gives me quite a laugh."

Business head is ever worried,
Forms and blanks and checks and cash!
But he isn't to be hurried
Lest he might do something rash.

Personals and Features members
Search for facts and information,
Hope at least by this December
They will get an inspiration.

Getting those artistic mixtures
Turned the Artists' hair to grey;
Camera shots and baby pictures—
Well, it's better not to say.

At his desk the staff's adviser
Plods through papers large and small,
Thinking that it would be wiser
If he were to drop it all.

The final and complete edition
Is heralded with much acclaim;
But, alas, the staff's condition
Will never, never be the same.

ZENNA KAUFMAN

Class Prophecy

(A FANTASY)

PART I—IN WHICH I LISTEN TO AN AMAZING PROPOSAL.

I was a dull, dark and oppressively moist morning. The excessive humidity of the day and had rendered everything save relaxation impossible; so, with an eye toward escaping the ill effects of the weather, I settled myself upon the porch hammock. There I spent some small time gazing lazily at the world through half-closed lids; in a moment I was asleep.

The grip of a strong hand upon my shoulder awakened me suddenly. I looked up, and beheld, through the smoky blue haze, a tall, square-shouldered, and immaculately-dressed gentleman standing before me.

From the crown of his snap-brimmed sport hat to the gleaming tips of his shoes, this elegant person simply radiated culture—so much so that an almost visible aura of splendor seemed to lend itself to his physique. Indeed, so changed had he become that at first I did not even recognize my old classmate, HOWARD STEIN.

With mixed emotions, I exchanged greetings with the dear chap, and, arm in arm, we entered my abode. Once inside, my companion lit a black stogie and poured himself a drink. Then, midst gulp and puff, he explained the reason for his first visit to me in twenty years.

HOWARD, it appeared, had been engaged in agriculture for half of this period, during which time he had secured a monopoly over a large part of Texas. Thoroughly bored, he sought some avocation that might provide an outlet for his tremendous nervous energy without his having to resort to real physical labor.

So, in collaboration with Mr. HARVEY EISENSTODT, another gentleman-farmer turned scientist, he interested himself in the intricacies of aviation, and with Weequahic graduates as his aides, completed the construction of an aerial machine the like of which had never before been seen on this earth. It was terrific.

In size, the craft compared favorably with a small ocean liner. It was divided into twelve city blocks. In this area were hotels, theatres, parks, beaches, libraries, etc.; in short, all essentials for the enjoyment of life. One of the night-clubs was featuring at that time a scintillating swing aggregation featuring MORTY LIPPMAN, band leader; SEYMOUR NEWMAN, saxophonist; ARNOLD KESSLER, "bass" man; JOE PERDECK, slide trombonist; and MILFORD PERMISON, who rendered a specialty number on the bazooka. A mammoth project, who can deny?

The exterior of the flying monster had been cast of hard carbon, intensely heated and compressed. This work was undertaken by Mr. ARTHUR BORTNICKER, head of the THEVENET and VERNICK Boiler Factories, Inc.

The hull's bottom was notched with infinitesimal grooves the shape and size of light rays, on the theory that, once started, the ship would slide up and down the rays and could thus proceed at a speed faster than light itself. This incidently was the creation of MEYER BURGSTEIN, the brilliant mathematician. Interior decorations were by SIDNEY KATZ.

Well, the owners had contracted to sell the ship to Mr. IRVING OSTROW, buyer of men's clothing, who had taken up the purchase of rocket ships as a sideline. IRVING had demanded, prior to the contract's being signed, that a small test-flight (to Mars, for instance) be made to prove the invention's air-ability.

And this is where my friend came to the point. A list of passengers was being considered to make the flight. Qualifications for travel were that the passenger prove himself to be a bona fide member of Weequahic's January, 1940, graduating class. "Will you come along?" he asked.

He then handed me a sheet upon which was inscribed a list of celebrities already engaged. They included: ESTELLE PECKELIS, housewife and Mah Jong queen of America; MARION WEISSMAN, acting in the capacity of head nurse; FRANCES COHEN, STEIN'S private secretary; ANNETTE NIEBERG, svelte and sophisticated beauty salon owner; the tango team of JACK OSTROWSKY and DOTTY ROTHMAN, international dancing marvels; HANNAH NASELSKY, famous commercial photographers' model; BEA HERMAN, winner of the Krispy Krunches Breakfast Food jingle contest; DORIS LEVIN, glamorous movie siren; JOSEPHINE PERLMUTTER, and MAXINE MENKES, missionaries; ROBERT COYLE, the genius who had built our ship's oxygen tank interior; IRENE LERNER, head of the Cupid Matrimonial Agency; LOUISE STONE, best-dressed woman in the world; IRV GROD and MURRAY FRIEDMAN, young business executives, who were already bidding for the rocket stock that OSTROW had bought up; HAROLD MELINEK and LARRY CHURGIN, suave and polished international diplomats; JOSEPH ELLIS, sagacious political boss; HOWARD SANDUSKY and ISADORE BLESNICK, strong men with Tingling Bros. Circus; JERRY HOLDER, who had just received a promotion in the ranks of the Junior G-Men; MARTY HORWITZ, manufacturer of High School Latin Ponies; BOB REICHMAN, who had a concession to sell hot dogs during the trip; WALTER HASTREITER, the beer-baron; JERRY LEVY, banker; BENSON TUCHSCHER, our cross-country messenger boy; JULES BAUER, head-waiter; SHIRLEY STOLLMAN and LENORE RUDOMINER, who had come along to see what the Men of Mars looked like; JULIE FELD and FRANK CHENITZ, coaches at the Midwestern University of HOWARE-U; and HAROLD KRASNAGER, the playboy.

When STEIN had read me this formidable list, it was with some small reluctance that I added my own lowly name. But I did; and that evening we took the midnight train for Texas. Soon we had reached the Rocket Laboratories. I entered the hangars; the crew and passengers were assembled; the great flight was on. Glory, fame, riches and stuff awaited us. So—Weequahic Uber Alles!—we started.

PART 2—WHICH TELLS OF THE ACCIDENT.

Mr. NORMAN SPREI, our helmsman, had comparatively little to do, and we were nearing the end of our flight. There were three men in the control room: SPREI, who was there on duty; LAWRENCE STOLZ, who was there out of curiosity; and I, who was just there.

Our captain grew weary and, beckoning to STOLZ, he told that individual to awaken him should something go amis. He then curled up upon a sofa. I followed his example at once. I find it very easy to sleep, in the company of my fellow Weequahicans.

I awoke with a start. Everything was in confusion. SPREI seemed to be screaming something at STOLZ, while the miserable LAWRENCE cringed in abject terror at our feet. The ship whirled around like a top.

Little did the smug HOWARD STEIN know what fate awaited him; he was probably at that very moment waltzing dreamily with FLORENCE SCHWARTZ in one of the ballrooms.

Just then I felt a sinking of the heart and a squeezing of the gullet. An icy chill passed over my frame, for—Sacre Dies and Holy Smoke—Mars hove in sight.

And STOLZ, dear readers, HAD WRECKED THE BRAKE CONTROL! You see, the "brakes were to be applied when Mars' gravitational belt was reached. We would then have glided in without power.

Well, nothing could be done now. All we did was wait.

BOOM!

We exploded. Little bits of Weequahic sweaters blew up about me. I felt myself falling down.

I awoke to find myself back in the hammock where I had fallen asleep studying for the final exams. The sound of gay laughter came to me; three little tots, JERRY ALTERMAN, FRIEDA GALUBCHICK, and MILTY COOPER skipped merrily by, and I later joined them in a game of hopscotch. This concludes the Weequahic pioneer interplanetary flight, a daydream in the mind of your humble narrator.

LEONARD SCWARTZSTEIN.

Flashes from 221

Room 221 is a well-known place,
Where is seen many a familiar face.
We will start right in with the front of the class,
Where sits a blonde and bright-eyed lass.
Her words are few, her manner tame;
Ada Aranowitz is her name.
And fluttering in just before the bell,
Having so much news to tell,
Flo Fleischer just talks about this and that,
And asks Beatie Crane how is dear old Matt;
Then all at once a tear-strained voice
Pleads with Betty Gabel to be her choice
When senior prom escorts are picked,
For Gerry Krasner just won't be licked.
And every morning without any fail,
Ruth Grubstein comes in with a long-winded tale
Of how Seymour was there when the other boy called,
That she felt so awful she could have bawled.
When papers are given out or collected,
This author is the one who is selected;
Not that she likes the job at all,
But she has to respond to teacher's call.
Bernie Gietter can be usually found
Sitting in his seat not making a sound.
Arlene Jennis sits back and enjoys
Gabel and Grubstein and their accustomed noise.
These are a few of the lovable dears
Whom Miss Steinholtz has had to put up with for years.

SENIOR STUDIES

SENIOR SYMPHONY

Seventeen years ago was born
A wild-eyed tooter on the horn;
The name of this amazing player,
Whom you might know, is Lillian Mayer.
Her "ump-pahs" are the very best;
She plays them with terrific zest.
And hopes some day a band to lead,
A second Toscanini indeed!
"Spoil the child but spare the rod"
Is Mr. Melnik's thought of Grod,
The fellow who's always chewing gum
And banging loudly on the drum.
"Give it the ax, the ax, the ax!"
Is the general comment on Kanter's sax!
He plays the clarinet too, because
He thinks it will double his applause.
Becky's the horn that belongs to Ruth,
A wonderful trumpet player, in truth.
Not only is her instrument a gem,
But she triple-tongues with the best of them.
There are very few people who seem to know
How well Sidney Katz plays the oboe,
Or with what great technique he fiddles away,
Or how grandly on the drums he can play.
Then there's that wonderful drummer boy,
The band and orchestra's pride and joy.
His identity is easy to guess;
He is Milford Permison—no less!
Misha Mitzman's violin
In orchestra adds to the general din,
While in band the blasts of his baritone horn
Make his fellow players forlorn.
Thelma Weisinger's a lass
Over whom we must not pass;
A technique like hers is certainly rare;
Her piano playing's beyond compare.
Our first trumpet player is Leonard Polow
Whose examples it would be wise to follow.
He's worked himself up in his years in the band
To become the player who deserves most, a hand.
And then, of course, there is me,
An awful poet as you can see;
But I do play piccolo and toot
With all my might upon the flute.

Preface, Foreword, Introduction

(Or What Have You?)

THE Senior Society for Scientific Research was confronted with the terrific task of writing a term thesis in order to get the much coveted graduate degree. Were they frightened? No! Did they procrastinate? Oh, most emphatically, no! They immediately set about to rock the scientific world with their discoveries.

As you undoubtedly know, chemists* have stated that there are only 92 elements and anything past Uranium is too unstable to exist. Alas, short-sighted ones! They overlooked Weequahic where the most unstable of elements not only exist but positively assert themselves!

By breaking down that complex compound, the Class of 1940, we have discovered a sum total of 262 new, extraordinary, gigantic, colossal, et cetera, et cetera, elements. These we have carefully analyzed and now present to the public. However we feel we must caution our readers. This is a terrifically learned doctrine and fit only for the mentality of such brilliant creatures as have reached their senior year. Beware—all lesser mortals; do not attempt it.

The discoveries of those courageous chemists who have braved being asphyxiated by H_2S and eaten away by HNO_3 and H_2SO_4 deserve your attention at this time.

SPORTS

Boys' Sports

A Salute to those grand athletes of our class, whose splendid performance on the gridiron, basketball court, diamond, and track, carved quite a niche in our school's athletic Hall of Fame.

FRANK CHENITZ

"Buby", who was a guard on one of the best basketball teams in the school's history made his letter last season. He was floor captain and saw more action than did any other member of the team.

JULIUS FELD

"Julie" was the basketball team's sensation. In addition to breaking up two "sudden death" games, he was the team's highest scorer. He earned his letter during his second year at Weequahic.

EDWIN GREENBERG

"Red" was a junior when he earned the first of the two letters he possesses in track. His specialty was the quarter mile. In 1938, in city meet competition, he proved to be the city's fourth best in his event.

MORTON LIPPMAN

"Morty's" first task upon entering our school as a junior was to go out and win a track letter. He won his first for the shot-put. In addition he earned his second letter in discus throwing by continuing the school's annual record in this event.

BENSON TUCHSCHER

"Tuck" wound up his high school career in a blaze of glory by gamely racing to a well deserved letter in cross-country.

DAN MACGREGOR

"Mac" was an all-around athlete. In his freshman year he earned his letter for track and kept up his good work by earning two more track letters in following seasons. In his first year out for a position on the football team he won his letter and has earned his second letter during the past season. In addition "Danny" was a fine cross-country man.

HERMAN POLLACK

"Hymie", despite his honest appearance, was the baseball team's most proficient base-stealer. He earned his letter in his second year of varsity participation. His batting average belied his ability because he proved to be a valuable "in a pinch" hitter.

HOWARD SANDUSKY

"Sandy" spent his first year on the track team in observing the way to win. His second year he spent in winning. Howard's specialty was the javelin throw which won him his track letter.

MALCOLM SILVER

"Mal", Weequahic's own Bobby Jones, had a record almost as good as the forementioned champion. In three years of competition, for which he was awarded his three letters, "Mal" won every match but one.

Intramurals

The following boys of our class did much to make the intramural leagues in our athletic program a success:

IRVING OSTROW, who was student manager of the leagues for the last two years.

ROBERT BIERMAN, HERMAN POLLACK, LARRY CHURGIN, and MORTON ROSEN, who were four of the leagues' most capable officials.

LARRY CHURGIN, who was our class's gift to the cheering squad.

Our class rounded out its sports program by taking an active part in all of the other clubs and on all the other teams available in the school's sports program.

LITERATURE

Keynote

WHILE we have been producing our Yearbook, many history-making events have been occurring beyond our small realm of high-school life.

As we accept the certificate of achievement in secondary education, we are congratulated by those who wish us well, but who warn us that we are facing an unsettled world.

On the eve of our departure, and as we bid farewell for the last time to our Alma Mater and face our future responsibilities, we leave a few sentiments which represent our more carefree moments.

We are proud of the ideals that inspired these thoughts and emotions. They represent our Yearbook.

GERTRUDE DAVIS

The Four Ages

When first this high school I began,
Our teachers all gloated to a man,
"The Frosh year hard you'll surely find,
The Sophomore year won't be so kind;
The Junior year—Oh, Glory Be!
But when a Senior, there's gaiety."

As Frosh year prophets they are fit:
No crime, no tort, did they commit.
The subjects were hard as could be,
There was no time for society.
Many freshmen still were left,
Because they were not quite so deft.

The Sophomore year took hours of study,
No time had I for clubs or buddy.
The tests were hard, and marks not high,
And lucky were those who did get by.
But still not discouraged, or possessing a fear,
We looked with hope toward our Junior year.

But in Junior year they kept us busy,
I burnt the candle 'til I was dizzy.
Still hopes had I that soon you'd see
Present at parties long absented me.
And with these hopes, I dreamt of the time,
When all I'd do, would be dance and dine.

The Senior year is here at last!
But, minus the ease that was forecast.
There's no such thing as ease in school;
You must always apply the Golden Rule.
Lectures, book reports, and still some more
Homework they handed us by the score!

The end is nigh: Four years have passed.
The goal will soon be here at last.
Before me lies but one great dam:
The justly famous 4A Exam.
They say it's hard, yes, far from light,
AND THIS ONE TIME THEY MUST BE RIGHT.

LENORE RUDOMINER
BEATRICE HOLLANDER

The Opposite

He stands erect and very still
When Artie Shaw plays a swingy trill.

His feet are quiet, his face a mask,
"What's wrong with him?" all jitterbugs ask.

His clothes are clean and neatly pressed;
His choice of music is always the best.

He goes with glee for Bach and Strauss;
If the bugs hear B. G., they bring down the house.

His face is serene, his manner subdued;
His actions are sweet and never rude.

He is hated and scorned for his musical pick.
"Why?" you ask. Answer "corny hick."

Life or Business

(Man's Musings)

It all is so boring—doing everything the same;
What do you do in life at all but only strive for fame?
You get up in the morning, and dress and then you eat,
And then you go to work and in the business world compete.

You most likely have a mean old boss, by chance he may be kind;
However he may treat you, it is still the same old grind.
Perhaps you have an hour lunch, most likely just a half,
You work just like a slave all day, you never get a laugh.

You wait and wait and wait and then at last it's time to leave,
And thoughts of your supper are all you can conceive.
You get home at last to a cross and grouchy wife,
Who hasn't started supper yet—oh, heck, what a life!

You eat again and smoke your pipe and read your paper then,
Until your wife finds work for you, and then stay up till 10.

And then you go to bed again, just as every day,
Waiting for Dame Fortune to help you find your way,
And so is life for everyone, always just the same,
But alas, it can't be changed for us, so why should we complain?

BLANCHE BERNSTEIN

With Apologies To Poe

It was not so many years ago,
In this school which is dear to me,
I came as a Freshman humble and low;
I was in high school, you see,
And I lived with no other thought than to know
The joys of a Sophomore to be.

Two years had passed, I was a Junior
In this school which is dear to me;
I loved it with still a greater love
And cherished each memory;
And so I knew that come what may
They would always be part of me.

And this is the reason that just this year,
From this school that is dear to me
With much regret I now depart;
For my school is soon to be
Just a vision that has passed,
One that was dear to me.

THELMA SHACHAT
JANET SHULMAN

What Lies Ahead

The days have gone their golden way;
Our carefree childhood years have sped;
We can but lift our eyes and say
"What lies ahead?"

Those fragments of Time, what mean they now,
A memory clear, or dim, or dead;
The prayer impressed on every mouth,
"What lies ahead?"

Ages pass and come and go;
Men are born; they live and grow;
Youth unfolds, begins to rise,
To raise its vigor to the skies.
The young must yield their strength and blood
To carry on life's streaming flood.

That is our purpose: to live on,
Build up the confidence slipping down;
To wear our power for a crown.
We now can proudly lift our head,
We need not say "What lies ahead?"

ALVA SCHENK

Piccolo Player's Complaint

(Football Season)

It's hard to march and play with grace
With hair in your eyes and dust in your face,
With a couple of thousand things to do
And a bunch of pebbles in your shoe,
Plus the deafening roar of the drums behind
Which you are not supposed to mind.

Three whistles, turn left—three whistles, turn right;
Be sure to keep the baton in sight;
Read your music; keep in step;
Play correctly and with pep!
Don't mind the gale that howls through
The few thin sweaters between it and you.

See that your instrument has a shine;
Whatever you do, don't get out of line;
Watch the way you use your feet;
And when you finally reach your seat,
You find that you will have to play
Just when you'd like to watch the fray.

And some people think it must be grand
To be a member of the band!

DORIS MURIEL ALEXANDER

Fleeting Years

First year—
It's all so new;
Years before you;
No end in view;
Sophomores leer.

Second year—
How long it's taking;
The dawn is breaking;
You start awakening;
Things become clear.

Third year—
Still doing homework;
You try to shirk;
But you have to work;
Another year.

Fourth year—
This is the end;
You're turning the bend;
Who'll be your friend?
The end is here.

Next year—
School days have passed;
They went so fast;
Why didn't they last?
Life is so queer.

FLORENCE DWORTZAN

Quips from Quotes

LOGIC?

What is so rare
As a day in June,
In the winter time,
'Neath a harvest moon?

ALLERGY

Can it be the trees,
That fill the breeze,
With stuff that makes you
Want to sneeze?

WANTED

A gust of wind, it brought to me,
A thought, full of sincerity;
When I am cast upon life's sea,
Pray, who will jitterbug with me?

JOY

The day's at the morn;
I'm happy and gay;
I can sleep for some time;
For there's no school to-day.

APOLOGIES TO SHAKESPEARE

To be or not;
To want a lot,
That you ain't got,
Is not so hot.

ITCH DAY I DIE

Oh, tell me whence it rises,
This thought so full of woe;
It must be my winter underwear;
Gee, it itches so.

CONTRARY

The best laid plans of mice and men
Oft go astray.
I told my prof' I was too sick
To take the test to-day.
He must have thought I lied to him;
He said to take it anyway.

ODE TO A FLY

Hope springs eternal in the human breast,
But I cannot rest,
For there's a pest,
A fly, that tickles my nose with zest.

MIDNIGHT OIL

There's rain upon my window sill;
Inside my room it's very still;
My mind's relaxed; my thoughts are nill;
Of homework I have done my fill.

11 P. M.

Pray, what noise from yonder window falls?
And who, from over yonder, calls?
And from whence do the bugles blow?
It must be the neighbor's radio.

TYPICAL

So you want to borrow my homework to-day,
And after that, my O. B. A.?
Are there any more favors you wish me to do,
Comb your hair, or shine your shoe?

RELIEF

I am monarch of all I survey;
I can ignore my teachers and what they say,
I can sit and chew gum, and I'm very gay,
Says the senior "A" on graduation day.

UTOPIA

Listen my children, and you shall hear
A story that will hold your ear;
The principal has made it clear,
There'll be no homework at all this year.

"OUR WIGWAM ON THE HILL"

Thank You

NOW that we have reached the conclusion of our LEGEND, we wish to extend thanks to all who aided in its production.

To Mr. Harold LaPenna, whose untiring aid and advice pulled us through many trying moments.

To Miss Elizabeth L. Cuttriss, who enabled us to make THE LEGEND a work of art.

To Mr. Mayer, whose aid in the technical layout was indispensable.

To Mr. Ranucci, who skillfully handled our finances.

To the members of the staff for their cooperation in making this Yearbook a success.

To the advertisers for their generous contributions.

To the Colyer Printing Co. for their helpful guidance in assembling this Yearbook.

THE EDITORS.

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to the Weequahic High School students for their confidence in appointing us official photographers to the January, 1940, LEGEND.

It has been a distinct pleasure to work with the editor and staff in producing what we believe to be an outstanding yearbook.
